

Contents of NISE bulletin

Vol. 5 (March 1995)

- The effect of soft-touching assistance on the hand motor control of disabled children -a comparison with facilitated communication- (Toshiro Ochiai 1-7)
- Integrated media-oriented instruction for students with learning difficulties at elementary school -a case study (Shigeru Narita, Tetsuya Munekata, Shimpei Takuma 8-16)
- Problems of educational methods on sensory-motor development for profoundly and multiply handicapped children (Yutaka Tokunaga 17-23)
- Speech information processing of a child with developmental retardation -an approach using nursery rhyme (Shigeki Kuboyama 24-29)
- Measurement of oxygen saturation by pulse oximeter during learning activities of profoundly and multiply handicapped children and adults (Ryuichi Kawasumi, Tadashi Matsuda 30-36)
- 1993 survey of deaf-blind children and students : with focus on population with congenital rubella and retinitis pigmentosa (Megue Nakazawa, Hiroyuki Takasugi 37-43)
- Experimental lessons related to the psychological care of health impaired children (Kazumi Yabuki 44-49)
- The psychophysiological dimension of ADD : possible applications to remedial education (Haruo Shinoda 50-56)
- Development of information infrastructure for special education in Japan (Morio Shibayama 57-65)